

151218 - She took some money from her mother when she was still alive without her knowledge, and now she is the only heir

---

the question

I used to take money from my mother's wealth without her knowing to buy more clothes and have extra money to spend. I had decided to repent, but my mother died suddenly. How can I absolve myself of this sin? Please note that I am her only heir and everything she owned is now mine. What should I do so that my Lord will be pleased with me? Is my mother's death a punishment for me from Allah?.

Detailed answer

Praise be to Allah.

If a child takes from the wealth of the one who is obliged to spend on him, whether that is the father or the mother, one of two scenarios must apply:

(1)

He takes what he needs to meet his need for food, drink, clothing and so on. This is permissible, even if it is done without the knowledge of the person whose money it is, if he has no way of getting his rights to maintenance except in this manner. That is because of the report narrated by al-Bukhaari (5264) and Muslim (1714) from 'Aa'ishah (may Allah be pleased with her) who narrated that Hind bint 'Utbah said: O Messenger of Allah, Abu Sufyaan is a stingy man and he does not give me enough maintenance for myself and my children, except what I take from his wealth without his knowledge. He said: "Take from his wealth whatever is sufficient for yourself and your children, on a reasonable basis."

(2)

He takes more than he needs for his maintenance for the purpose of having more. This is not permissible and it comes under the heading of taking wealth in an unlawful manner. In this case he has to repent and return the money to its owner if he is still alive or to his heirs if he is dead.

Shaykh Ibn 'Uthaymeen (may Allah have mercy on him) was asked: I am the only daughter of my father, and my father - praise be to Allah - is very well off. Sometimes I take from his money without him knowing and he does not ask me about it. Am I sinning by doing that...?

He replied: It is not permissible for anyone to take anything from anyone else except in a lawful manner. If this girl used to take money from her father's pocket because she needed it and if she asked her father for it he would not give it to her, then there is nothing wrong with that because Hind bint 'Utbah asked the Prophet (blessings and peace of Allah be upon him) [about such a matter]; in fact she complained to the Prophet (blessings and peace of Allah be upon him) that her husband did not give her enough for her and her children, and he said: "Take from his wealth whatever is sufficient for yourself and your children."

But if the father of this woman who is asking the question did not withhold anything from her if she asked him for what she needed, then it is not permissible for her to take anything from him without his knowledge.

End quote from Fataawa Noor 'ala ad-Darb

Based on that, you have to repent to Allah, may He be exalted, for what you have done and feel remorse for that. You do not have to return the money unless there are other heirs who inherit along with you, because they have a right to this money.

Offer a great deal of du'aa' for your mother, because that is part of honouring her after her death. If you give some of the wealth in charity on her behalf, that is the hope that it will reach her and will be part of your repentance.

And Allah knows best.