

170324 - Can a woman pray naafil when the iqamah for prayer has been given?

the question

Is it permissible for a woman to offer a regular Sunnah prayer before an obligatory prayer, such as the Sunnah prayer before Zuhr, when the iqamah (call immediately preceding the congregational prayer) has been given?

A woman is not obliged to offer the prayer in congregation like a man, such that she would have to stop or delay the Sunnah prayer that is offered before the obligatory prayer and offer it after the obligatory prayer in order to catch up with the congregational prayer.

Detailed answer

Praise be to Allaah.

Muslim (710) narrated from Abu Hurayrah that the Prophet |(blessings and peace of Allah be upon him) said: "When the iqamah for prayer is given, there is no prayer except the prescribed prayer." This applies to the one to whom the command to pray in congregation is addressed or to the one who is present in the mosque when the iqamah for prayer has been given. With regard to the woman who is in her house or a man who is excused for not attending prayers in congregation, they are not addressed in this hadeeth, so they may offer the naafil prayer even when they can hear the iqamah from the mosques.

The same applies to a man if he wants to pray in a mosque other than the one in which the iqamah has been given; he may offer the naafil prayer in his house.

It says in Kashshaaf al-Qinaa' (1/460): If the iqamah has been given, i.e., the muezzin has started to give the iqamah for the prayer the he wants to offer behind the imam (then he should not do any naafil prayer), otherwise he may do so, such as if the iqamah is given in a mosque in which he does not intend to pray. This was stated in al-Furoo'. To sum up, there should be no prayer except the prescribed prayer (after the iqamah has been given), so he should not start any naafil prayer or any regular Sunnah prayer, before Fajr or otherwise, in the mosque or elsewhere, or even in his house, because the Prophet (blessings and peace of Allah be upon him) said: "When the iqamah for prayer is given, there is no prayer except the prescribed prayer." End quote.

Islam Question & Answer

General Supervisor:

Shaykh Muhammad Saalih al-Munajjid

For more information see the answer to question no. 33582

And Allah knows best.