

21967 - He cannot prostrate on the ground when he prays in congregation

the question

I have a medical problem with my knees, and I can only bend them with difficulty. When I pray in congregation I cannot prostrate on the ground because of the crowding in the row and the fact that I need to move a great deal. So I am forced to prostrate in the air (i.e., by bending forward slightly). But if I pray on my own at home, I am able to prostrate on the ground with all seven parts of the body. So should I pray with the congregation in the mosque or on my own at home?

Detailed answer

You should pray in the mosque, in congregation, because praying in congregation is obligatory, and you should prostrate in the manner that you are able, even if it is by gesturing. In this case you will not be regarded as having failed to prostrate.

This answer was given to us by Shaykh ‘Abd al-Rahmaan al-Barraak, and we have paraphrased it.

And Allaah knows best.
